

Friday, March 30, 2007

.xxx domain canned at ICANN meeting.

Bill of Rights. (From the public domain.) On March 30, 2007, ICANN voted nine to five against adding a .xxx domain. Thanks to everyone who raised their voices against adding a .xxx domain, which I blogged about on March 27, 2007. I will try to find out who comprises ICANN's voting members, and how they are appointed. On the one hand, this .xxx vote is reason to celebrate. On the other hand, the five votes in favor of adding a .xxx domain are grounds for concern. Jon Katz.

Posted by Jon Katz in First Amendment at 06:00